How does Media Influence the Behavior of the Children?

Media and television play a significant role in the everyday lives and behavior of the children.

Therefore, the effect and influence could be both negative and positive. High-quality and moralistic television shows help in shaping the personality of the kids and make them a better human. On the other hand, violent and low-quality shows have an adverse effect on their lives and everyday behavior.

Television and media do not have the same effect on all the kids. Where some kids do not take much of an impression, there are others that may get overly affected by it. Furthermore, we all know that media could be used to bring about positive change in the lives of the kids. This is especially true for the educational channels and programs that are specifically made for the kids.

On the other hand, exposure to inappropriate material may led the child into the wrong direction. Therefore, the media itself is not to be blamed, the quality of the content and parents' supervision, both plays a role in determining the effects of media on the kids.
